Marijuana Addiction: Stop Smoking Today...

Addiction to the psycho-active narcotic Marijuana (THC) is recognised by health professionals as being as addictive as heroin. The psychological dependency and the habitual rituals associated with smoking can be even more challenging due to the availability and social acceptability of smoking. Most stop smoking programmes have little impact on the psychological aspects of psychoactive drug addiction. Most programmes are fear based and assume drug addiction can be treated with other harmful and equally addictive drugs! These treatment approaches do not acknowledge the psychoactive nature of Marijuana; they do not directly address the psychological dependency on the drug and fail to deliver effective resources necessary to facilitate change and sustain long term smoking cessation.
